Two Autos Wrecked Yesterday

A Lozier seven passenger touring car and a Ford touring car were towed into town last evening practically demolished as the result of two bad accidents that occurred yesterday in which fortunately the drivers of both machines escaped without serious injuries.

The Lozier car was the property of George Wyland, proprietor of the Wellington hotel at Charleroi. Mr. Wyland with a party of friends was returning from the Elks picnic at Idlewild last evening and was in the act of changing gears on the Webster hill when the clutch slipped and the car shot backward down the hill. The brakes refused to work and in order to save himself and friends, Mr. Wyland steered the machine into the side of the hill. The car turned completely over, badly smashing one side, but the occupants escaped.

J. H. Racy went to Pittsburgh yesterday morning in his Ford touring car and had as his passengers Meyer Meyers and George A. Rogaliner. Mr. Rogaliner and Mr. Meyers found it imposible to return with Mr. Racy and took the street car home. This act probably saved them from serious injury as on the return trip Mr. Racy lost control of his machine while rounding a curve on the hill opposite Monongahela and the car went over the embankment. Mr. Racy escaped with a few slight bruises on his arm and leg, but the car was badly damaged and towed into town late last evening.

Big Crowd At Outing Yesterday

The annual outing of the St. Leonard's R. C. church was held at Eldora park for the first time yesterday and attracted one of the largest crowds ever attending a similar event. Special cars conveying the children left Eighth street at 9 o'clock in the morning and from the time of their arrival at the park until the special cars left at 7o'clock in the evening, the kiddies enjoyed themselves on the bamboo slide, roller coaster and merry-go-round. Father Wigley, in order that the children might enjoy themselves to their heart's content, took over the park for the entire day and all amusements were free.

The older people gathered at the dancing pavilion in the afternoon to enjoy the light fantastic, while others played euchre, the winners being awarded suitable prizes. In the evening the pavilion was crowded again with the younger set and despite the attempts of Jupiter Pluvius to dampen the ardor of those in attendance, all reported a pleasant time, and the outing was pronounced a success both in a financial and social way.

Bishop Canevin Will Be Here Tonight

This evening at 7:30 Bishop Regis Canevin of the Pittsburgh diocese will confer the sacrament of confirmation upon a class of two hundred persons at the St. Leonard's R.C. church. The class includes children and adults from this and surrounding towns. A special musical program has been prepared for the occasion and the Bishop will deliver a sermon. This will be one of the largest classes ever confirmed in the local church and a large crowd of friends and relatives will be present. It will be the first visit of the Bishop to this city in a number of years and many visiting priests from surrounding towns will be present to greet him.

Mecca Cafe Will Open Saturday

The Mecca Cafe, Monessen's largest and finest eating house will be formally opened Saturday, this week, at which time souvenirs will be presented to each visitor and an orchestra will furnish musis during the hours of 6 p. m. to 9 p. m. The cafe is located in the basement of the M. & B. confectionery store, and is without doubt the best equipped establishment of its kind in the valley.

Nothing has been left undone towards the comfort of the patrons and huge exhaust fans with a capacity of 1,500 cubic inches of fresh air a minute will keep the place cool and in a sanitary condition. A large horseshoe counter of white opalete with a seating capacity of nearly one hundred has been installed along with eight white opalete tables for the ladies. The room presents a pleasing appearance with white side walls, tables and flooring. A small room under the pavement can be used for family or small banquet affairs and this is well lighted from the street by an arrangement in the pavement.

In the kitchen everything has been arranged in the most sanitary manner with a special dish washing and drying arrangement, a massive refrigerator, large gas range with a patent exhaust to carry off all fumes, a short order plate and a patented egg boiler. The dishes were made from a special design and every piece carries the name of the restaurant. The entrance to the cafe is well lighted with a large flash sign costing $225.

The cafe will be under the management of P. A. Caloyer, an experienced man, who promises to make this place one of the leading restaurants in the valley, and will do everything in his power to make it popular with lovers of good home cooking of the sanitary kind. An experienced chef has been secured from the city and experienced help will be used both in the dining room and kitchen.

Woman To Spend Two Days In Jail

Mary B. Shaw was a prisoner at the police station last night and was given a hearing before the burgess this morning. It was charged that Mary appeared at the police station last night in an intoxicated condition, and the officer in charge was forced to lock her up. She plead guilty to having taken a few drinks but told the burgess she was not disorderly, but had decided to sleep all night in the station.

The burgess thought it would be a good idea for her to stay a day or two and rest up, so he fined her $2.00 and costs or two days to jail. She retired to her cell completely satisfied with the justice that had been meted out to her.

Peter Wilkonen who was released yesterday morning on a charge of drunkenness, appeared again on the same charge. This time he was fined $5.00 and costs or three days to street labor. He said he could get the money if an officer would accompany him to the hill. He was given the opportunity of negotiating his loan.

Pat McNanney came over from Scotdale to look the town over. He said it was the first time he had been here and that he did get a little too much booze, but he would like to go back home. When asked who he knew at Scotdale he said he was acquainted with Congressman Keister and that he was a nice man, but he said he never heard of Berkey Boyd. The prisoner was released upon his solemn promise to beat it right away.

Andy Lenardish was fined $7.00 for striking a fellow countryman over the head with a chair, cutting an ugly gash in his scalp. He paid the money.

The police department received a hurry-up message from Wireton last night to the effect that a big fight had been stirred up and that foreigners were slashing each other with knives. Constable E. L. Woolsey was notified and he armed himself with a warrant and started for the scene of trouble. He made several arrests and one man was badly cut and had to be removed to the Monessen-Charleroi hospital where surgical attention was given him.

Want Large Sum From Physician

A suit for damages to the extent of $5,000 was filed, based on a charge of malpractice against Dr. H. Inberg in the prothonotary's office at Greensburg Tuesday morning. A capias was ordered issued by the court and Inberg was ordered to give bail in the sum of $750.

It is charged in the suit which was filed by Mrs. Louise Keranen of this city for her nine year old son, that Dr. Inberg was called in last August to set a fractured arm. The physician is alleged to have bandaged the arm too tightly and then did not come to see the child for ten days. At that time the lad's mother took him to the physician and when the bandage was loosened, part of the flesh of the arm came off with the bandages. Again the doctor tied the arm up and then refused to have anything to do with the case, it is charged.

The boy was taken to the hospital where it was discovered that the bone had been improperly set and cared for and gangrene had set in. Two operations were necessary and the lad's arm was cut off above the elbow. The mother filed the suit through her attorneys, Robbins and Wyant, and the physician will be given an opportunity to explain the operation at the August term of court.

Concert At Band Stand This Evening

The famous Royal Italian band of the K. G. Barkoot shows, playing at Wireton this week, will give a special concert tonight in the new Sixth street park from 6:45 to 7:30, and judging by the reputation this organization has made during the brief stay in Monessen, the attendance should be very large. It can be said without fear of contradiction that no other band of twice the number of pieces visiting in town rendered the class of music in the manner the Barkoot band does. This expensive reportoire extends from rag time to grand opera. Following is the program for tonight's concert:

1—March ..... N. N.
2—Orpheum ..... Overture
3—El Travators ..... Selection
4—Pilgrim Chorus .... Tamhousa
5—Sextette from Lucia
6—Grand National Overture.

More Than a Meal Ticket

Now cometh Mrs. Sarah Christopher, philosopher and uplifter, of the effete east, who deposeth and saith: "Most women need one mate to talk Browning to them, while the other is a hewer of wood and drawer of water. Every woman ought to have two husbands—one a meal ticket and the other a poet."

Of course the lady is wrong as to the pair of husbands. The meal ticket would be certain to knock the poesy out of the poet, or the poet would eat the meal ticket, metaphorically speaking. But, isn't it a fact that most women do have an ideal aside from their husband? We will not call it "mate" or "husband." No woman's whole thought is given to her husband, no matter how fine a meal ticket he may be or how delightful he may be in other respects. She may be a happy and loyal wife and have no desire for a change, but in living with a man she learns his imperfections, and all men are so equipped with imperfections that there's always room for the formation of ideals, if the wife is a thinking wife. Whether her ideal shall be a poet, a musician, or something else artistic which her husband is not, depends upon her temperament. Sometimes, even, she looks above and beyond her plodding meal ticket and sees her ideal in a distinguished prize fighter.

That this is so is not wholly bad. The husband who is only a meal ticket goes to seed through need of a wife to push him toward her ideal True, woman may never make her meal ticket a poet, if that be her ideal, but she can prod him out of his satisfied self. To inspire is surely part of woman's mission. However, pleasing don't take these remarks as endorsement of "a mate to talk Browning to her." Any decent meal ticket would rear up and kick that condition to pieces amidst long continued and general applause.

Go to church is the slogan which is heard today in every city, town and hamlet throughout the country. Pick up any newspaper at any time in the big cities, and you will find there an appeal, either editorial or as a news story and even as advertising to the people to go to church on Sundays.

This appeal does not alone come from clergymen, but from lay members of churches and social workers. In short, there is and has been for quite some time a movement on foot to get every man, woman and child to go to church and to continue to do so.

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M. D. LL. D., Commissioner of Health

Medicine Habit

Many a man who would resent the efforts of a blacksmith to repair his piano, will acept the advice of his next door neighbor, regarding some favorite remedy for an ailment, the nature of which is by no means certain. He will consume innumerable bottles of "medicine" which are accompanied by guarantees that no reputable physician would think of making.

The human body is so much more delicate in its construction than any mechanical device ever invented, that to run the risk of upsetting the functions of the various organs by the use of preparations of which one has no accurate knowledge, is not only absurd but in many instances extremely dangerous.

There is another draw-back to self medication. The diagnosis of disease is a matter which requires skill and training of the highest kind. The symptoms of various disturbances in the human economy may manifest themselves by causing distress in some part of the body entirely separated from the seat of the difficulty. As an example indigestion is often the cause of headache. Such symptoms can only be properly related to the cause by one who is skilled in diagnosis. Food itself, under certain conditions, may produce disturbances as profound as those caused by potent drugs

The tendency of modern medicine is toward prevention and the present day physician makes far less use of drugs than did his predecessors. Despite this fact it has been estimated that the people of the United States spend some $500,000,000 a year for medicine, most of which is not prescribed by physicians. We consume more drugs than any other people in the world.

The individual who has any ailment which seems to necessitate the continued use of drugs, should, for his own welfare and safety, consult an able physician.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Big Week-end At Eldora Park

Affairs are being put in shape for three big days at Eldora park beginning Saturday and ending with Monday, which will be observed as the Fourth of July holiday. For Monday, a fireworks display has been arranged that will be set off by a corps of experts after 9 o'clock Monday evening.

On Saturday evening there will be a special dancing program. Ladies will be admitted free on this evening, and the dancing will be made a strong event.

On Sunday the Donora Steel Works band, one of the best known musical organizations along the Monongahela will give afternoon and evening concerts. Announcement is being made of a patriotic program to be rendered at both times.

Then on Monday will come one of the biggest holiday attractions of the entire season. Following the customs which obtain elsewhere, Independence Day will be celebrated heartily on Monday. The day will be more or less of a family outing day at the park and provisions will be made for caring for a large crowd. Then in the evening the fireworks display will be set off.

WHO PAYS?

Blue Blood and Yellow

VI.

Turning half way around, he saw that she was hanging half over the cliffside, her face pale and horror-stricken, her only hope for life, outside of a miracle—centering itself in her grip on his arm. He saw at a glance the almost sheer declivity of the mountain side, and a sickening dread overcame him as he thought of what it would mean, should his strength be not great enough to hold out. He would be carried over the side of the cliff with the one clinging to him! His foot slipped slightly, dislodging a pebble that bounced its echoing way down the mountainside. A horrible, cold dread was on him. His feet were slipping! With a quick, fearful, desperate stroke he struck her hand from his arm, and, shrinking back against the wall, watched her start on her downward slide, dragging a host of rattling pebbles in her wake.

She had slid about fifty feet when her outstretched, frantically-grasping hand closed around a tough twig deep rooted in the earth. She stopped abruptly, luckily having caught a grip there, for a few feet below her the slope stopped abruptly on a chasm yawning wide.

She looked appealingly, beseechingly at her husband, shrunk tight, horror-stricken against the wall.

Her plight, however, was not affecting her reason, as she thought when she was aware of his change of expression; the change was actual, and due to the fact that his ear had caught the sound of approaching footsteps along the hard, narrow path. These footsteps became more and more distinct, until a man appeared around the bend in the trail. This man was Paul Reed.

At first he saw only Scott, dreadfully pale and nervous looking; then, following Scott's gaze down the cliff-side, he went icy cold with terror for a moment. Had he been better bred, had the same blue blood which so distinguished Alfred Scott flowed in his veins, his terror might have lasted indefinitely, and Anita have plunged into the bottomless canyon. But he was vulgar, emotional, impulsive, and his poor brain, a product of centuries of nondescript admixture, took in the situation comprehensively, and had only realized the one course open a moment before his unpoised body had started to crawl carefully down to where Anita held on with a last despairing grip.

In a moment his strong grip was around her, and he began slowly, warily, laboriously, to fight his way back to the path. Scott's panic, meantime, had abated considerably, and continued to abate the nearer the man and his burden came, and when they were almost to the edge of the trail, half-way over it in fact, he bent and relieved Paul of Anita's weight, Paul managing to drag himself exhausted to the road.

She turned simply and said, "Thank you, Paul." She could say no more. So, taking Scott's proffered arm, she walked slowly away, leaving Paul standing puzzled, incomprehending, in the middle of the trail.

VII.

John Huff was tired of waiting. Huff was the tobacconist, creditor of Alfred Scott, whom Scott, a few days previously had silenced in his demands for payment by telling him that he would shortly be betrothed to Anita Logan, when his various debts would be settled.

It was the morning of the second day that he called at the Logan mansion and learned that Anita had gone up into the mountains with her sister, to spend a week there. Accordingly, he took the first train, and by noon arrived at the hotel in which Ann and her sister were stopping. He learned there that Ann and the young man lately appointed astronomer at the mountain observatory had left a half hour ago for a walk down the mountain side, and he set out immediately to overtake them.

* * * * * * *

The life-saving incident of the day before, and Anita's cold, formal "Thank you," had been a bit too much for Paul Reed.

He had some important duties to attend the next morning, and could not free himself of them until eleven o'clock. He then set out for the mountain hotel, only half a mile distant, his spirit troubled, his mind anxious and on the defensive against a maze of complications he scented but knew nothing of definitely.

VIII.

He met her alone, on the porch. Bess and Scott had gone for a walk together.

"Good morning, Ann"—awkwardly.

She came forward, her lips silent, her eyes eloquent, and held out her hand to him. Together, as by prearranged understanding, they started to walk away from the house.

"I say, you haven't forgotten, Ann? You promised you'd let me know. Oh, Ann, don't you love me?"

His warm, magnetic personality, that personality which had always made her fearfully glad, now again woke in her that feeling of infinite affinity which no personal effort could overcome.

She looked up at him, her eyes liquid and pain-drawn.

"It can never be, Paul," she said half chokingly.

He was about to ask that fearful "Why?" when they became conscious of a man approaching them. It was Huff.

He came up, hat in hand, and bowing respectfully, said to Ann, "Miss Logan, my name is Huff—John Huff; I'm a tobacconist in town, and a creditor of Alfred Scott's. Not a large creditor—not nearly as large as some of them—but then I'm only a small retailer. Scott's bill has been dragging along now for over eight months, and I'm anxious to get it settled. Is there any truth in Mr. Scott's statement that you will marry him and pay his debts? He told me so two days ago, and I want to know whether there's any truth in it?"

Anita's eyes, soft and tender a moment ago, flashed with the fury of a vengeful goddess.

"Did he tell you that?" she queried.

"Yes, miss."

"Will you leave this affair to me?"

"Yes, miss."

"Very well, then. You may go. I shall communicate with you."

He bowed, and was gone.

Ann had, at this latest revelation of her husband's blue blood, forgotten Paul entirely. She started walking quickly back, and there was that in her stride which boded ill for the last of the Scotts. Paul followed behind, keeping her ever in sight and was surprised when at a turn in the road, she stopped suddenly, her whole body tense. He came up with her and saw what had caused her to stop so shortly.

IX.

This trail ended abruptly at the back porch of the hotel; and from where they stood they could see quite plainly, Bess, seated in a large easy chair, on the broad arm of which Scott had perched himself. As they watched he fondly kissed his wife's sister.

Anita watched but for a moment; then, running forward swiftly, followed by Paul, she dashed up the steps of the porch, and stood, a torch of wrath, confronting Scott.

"You most contemptible—" The sentence remained unfinished, her scorn for the vile thing before her making words futile.

"Bess," she said, turning suddenly and trying to make her tense voice soft, "I'm married to this"—with a wave of her hand. "I've kept it secret, because the fortune left us would be forfeited, were I to marry before I reached the age of twenty-five. You received a like notice, so you know." She spoke quickly, anxious to get the preliminary explanation over with, so as to execute the action she had in mind. "Why I did it, God only knows, but I was blinded by the light of his ancestry."

"You might have done worse, you know," Scott sneered. "There weren't many opportunities left, you know, after your well-known intimacy with"—here he looked toward Paul—"the bricklayer's son."

Paul had been standing silently by, his face heavy and dull with despair, his heart unutterably sad within him, as the "queerness" of all the last few days became understandable.

He sprang at Scott, his face distorted horribly, his teeth bared, a low animal sound coming from his throat, and his hands shaking fearfully as they found their way to the other's throat. For the length of half a minute he held him thus—then, a sudden loathing for the resistless creature before him took the place of his fury, and he flung him, choking, to the ground.

When Scott recovered, a few minutes after, he learned, from the hotel proprietor, that Ann, Bess and Paul had hastily left for town. He started immediately in pursuit, sure that Ann had for her destination the office of her attorney.

He arrived at Rodgers' office just in time to hear Ann, through the closed door of the private office, finishing her story to the astounded attorney.

"—my fortune is gone. Now I want a divorce from that yellow thing called a blue blood."

Scott came in as she finished.

"One moment, please," he said. "You travel fast. Too fast. True, your declaration of our marriage has forfeited your part of the fortune"—here a cunning, insolent smile shaped his mouth—"but if you dare to push this divorce suit"—his voice became emphatically slow and intense—"I'll drag in your sister's name, and blacken it in the eyes of the whole world—utterly. Do you understand? Utterly! Yes, I know that your fortune has been forfeited; rather stupid of you, don't you think? But we'll manage. I know your sister will gladly share her part with us"—he accentuated the word hideously—"if she would protect her reputation."

For Half a Minute He Held Him Thus.

Ann stood back, appalled, unable to conceal her knowledge that she was powerless. She knew he would go to any lengths to compromise Bess, innocent as she was, in the eyes of the world, and realized how easy that would be. She would rather have suffered anything than have exposed Bess' fair name to this slander, and the world's contempt, and realized with resigned despair that he was aware of her nature, and was playing on it—realized that she must live out her days with a man she loathed—realized it and was helpless to avoid it.

She had paid dearly for her worship of "class," and would pay and pay and pay—endlessly.

Bess' young dream of love had degenerated to a hideous nightmare.

Paul stood by, the bright air castles of his youth burying in their tumbled debris his aspiring soul.

The Family Tree had borne its fruit.

He Can Who Thinks He Can

A Great Lecture of Optimism and Inspiration.

FOR eight years William Rainey Bennett has stood at the very forefront of the Redpath list of noted lecturers. His lecture is a great fusillade of facts, fun and fancy. His theme is "He Can Who Thinks He Can." In every brain is a sleeping genius. It can be awakened. This lecture will do it. It helps young people to find themselves. It gives health, poise and power. The lecture contains the famous "Wolf Chase," which Judge Ben B. Lindsey pronounced as good as the best Lew Wallace ever wrote.

Mr. Bennett will lecture on the night of the opening day of the Redpath Brockway Chautauqua during the coming season.

Baptism of Fire Greeted Mr. Harry Mestayer's Entrance In Motion Picture Plays

[Harry Mestayer is one of the most prominent actors on the American stage. He has assumed leading roles in many important stage productions and comes from a line of theatrical people. He has written herewith his experiences as a leading man in the Selig Red Seal play, "The Millionaire Baby."]

By HARRY MESTAYER.

"Two years ago if anyone had approached me with a contract to appear in motion pictures I would have turned down the offer. And yet, like many other actors, I have seen the light. The change of heart was not compulsory, for I came to realize that in motion pictures of higher class the conscientious actor has as great an opportunity for artistic work as on the spoken stage. I considered at some length, too, before I affiliated permanently with any motion picture concern, and I chose the Selig Polyscope company because of the enviable reputation attained by the Selig spectacular productions and the artistic environments made possible by the careful supervision of Mr. William N. Selig.

"When I started to work in 'The Millionaire Baby' in the Chicago studios of the Selig Polyscope company I was also appearing in the lead in a dramatic production on the speaking stage at one of the leading theaters in that city. This placed me under quite a strain and all I did for several weeks was work and sleep—and very little of the latter. I was at the studio every morning at 8:30 and worked steadily until 5 or 5:30 in the afternoon. Then I rushed downtown and, after a rather hurried supper, sped to the theater in time to appear on the stage at 8:15.

"It was quite an experience to be working in two characters which were themselves so different and which were presented through such widely different mediums, and this novelty relieved the monotony of such a steady grind.

"I will try to tell you some of the interesting things which occurred during the filming of the big scenes for The Millionaire Baby.' The first one that comes to my mind, and one which I will remember for a long, long time, was a fire scene in which I was supposed to rescue another actor, who was playing the part of my employer, from a burning building. Our director tried using smoke-pots, but these did not give the realistic effect which he desired, so he determined that the shack which had been erected in the large yard of the studio would have to be burned and that the two of us who were to appear in the scene would have to undertake what is termed by the players 'a stunt.' In other words, we would have to run the risk of being injured for the sake of realism.

"The other player was placed in the shack and the fire started. The 'business' of my part called for my rushing into the building and carrying the other man out through the smoke and flames and 'off' the scene. Oil was sprinkled on various parts of the shack, but not around the door through which we were to exit while I was doing the 'rescue.' All appeared to be going nicely as I made my way past the camera and started to enter the shack. Suddenly, however, the flames leaped up, fanned by a breeze which suddenly swooped down on us, and the other player and myself found that we were within the four walls of a blazing furnace, the door having caught fire, too.

"Our first impulse, naturally, was to make our escape in the quickest manner possible, but both of us realized that if we did it would require the rebuilding of the shack and repeating of the many efforts we had in getting the scene to the point we had reached, so we determined to make an effort to carry out our parts in the gamest manner possible. We rushed through the flames to the door and then with my fellow player I staggered through the door and out in front of the camera, where we both fell exhausted. When I saw the picture I easily understood why the director told us we had done very well, for the way we both sank to the ground was realistic in every detail.

"This scene also called for a rain effect and the water pouring down upon us added to our discomfort. This is merely one incident of the dangers to which a picture player is exposed. I would not have gone through that much in ten years on the stage, but the fact that I now can have my own home and keep regular hours every day more than makes up for all.

"I presume most of my readers know that 'The Millionaire Baby' was adapted to the screen from the story by Anna Katherine Green, and I am sure that those who have read the works of this noted writer will agree with me when I say that her plots are more baffling than those created by any other writer of the present day. There were scenes in the production where the slightest show of any kind of emotion would have disclosed the denouement and ruined the entire effect of the picture, so you can imagine how I felt at first playing close up to the camera and having to hold every muscle of my face tense when I had been used to being far away from the audience, with the footlights between us, where facial expression is a secondary consideration.

"This is one of the causes for many failures of stage stars when they appear before the camera. They fail to realize that everything they do is recorded by the camera and that a slip which might go unnoticed on the stage will ruin a whole scene in a film drama and possibly spoil the entire production if it is not retaken. One of the most difficult scenes in 'The Millionaire Baby' was the one in which the child is stolen. The skill of handling this so as not to 'kill' the whole story depended more upon the man who retouched the film after the director had finished with it than upon the players, and I understand that these men worked till the wee small hours several nights in succession.

"Had the players who supported me in this production been other than they were I do not doubt but what my lot would have been anything but an enjoyable one, but as it was we were just like one big family from the very moment we began work. It was this perfect team work in the many trying scenes that gave the film the finished effect which I am sure will prove a delight to audiences wherever it is shown. I have nothing but praise for all the players and the director and above all, for William N. Selig, the man who is behind the many splendid productions presented by his company, and whose orders to his directors are 'Make a picture regardless of cost and make one that they will remember.'"

"Cyclone" Meets His Match

Exhibition of wrestling such as has not been seen in Monessen for a long time is one of the big features of the K. G. Barkus shows, showing all week at Wireton. Large crowds attended the two shows Tuesday night when Charles Parfeniuk and Jim Poulias, middle weight exponent of the art of Monessen, succeeded in holding "Cyclone" Mitchell for ten minute periods, thereby receiving $10 each. All of the three are Greeks and the marvelous display of strength and cleverness displayed by each one is far above the average. Mitchell offers a dollar for each minute within ten or fifteen that any local man will stay on the mat with him without a fall.

The crowd on the show grounds early Tuesday night was very large considering the threatening weather and all shows and concessions were well patronized.

An added free attraction this week in addition to the high wire act of Mons. Monsulla, is the fancy bag punching by Jack McMahon, which is given each afternoon and evening.

Birthday Party Attended By Many Little Girls

A prettily arranged birthday party was enjoyed at the Presbyterian manse yesterday from 4 to 7 o'clock, p. m., in honor of Eunice Aurelia, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. O. MacDonald. It was the sixth birthday of the little hostess, and she was the recipient of numerous remembrances from her host of youthful friends. The inclemency of the weather interfered with games and other amusements which had been planned but the enjoyment of the occasion was not marred, for the manse doors were thrown open and about 50 young Americans took possession of the house and heartily enjoyed their privileges. A dainty lunch was served at 6 o'clock, with which the pastor and his wife were ably assisted by Mrs. E. M. Frye and Mrs. Grace Owens Tower, teachers of the little hostess and her company of friends. Those comprising the party consisted of the Primary class in the Presbyterian Sabbath school and school mates of the youthful hostess. At the appointed hour, each little guest with the gallantry of those of more mature years, bade the little hostess good-bye, wishing her more happy birthdays.

Elks' Annual Outing

With more than 15,000 Elks, their families and their friends in attendance, the fourth annual picnic of the Elks of Western Pennsylvania at Idlewild park yesterday was a success.

Eight special trains were run over the Pennsylvania main line and delegations from Uniontown, Connellsville and Scottdale filled two more that were scheduled for the Southwest branch. All morning an almost continual stream of automobiles passed through Greensburg over the Lincoln highway, it being estimated by observers that at least 800 cars went through laden with picnickers.

The Elks cast off their worries and in the mountain park enjoyed themselves to the utmost. Baseball games, baloon ascensions, races, sports, concerts, fireworks and dancing all featured in the program arranged by the committee in charge.

Each year the picnic has been larger than the last and this year a record in attendance and interest was established.

I had a displacement, bearing down, and backache, until I could hardly stand and was thoroughly run down when I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped me and I am in the best of health at present. I work in a factory all day long besides doing my housework so you can see what it has done for me. I give you permission to publish my name and I speak of your Vegetable Compound to many of my friends."—Mrs. ABEL LAWSON, 126 Lippitt St., Providence, R. I.

Danger Signals to Women

are what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness, and the blues. In many cases they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, which may be overcome by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

Larguire Trouble Finally Settled

The trouble between the borough of Monessen and Louis Larguire was settled yesterday, at least temporarily, when Borough Engineer Johns, Street Foreman A. Frazier and about a dozen workmen went to the Third street bridge and removed the concrete sidewalk Mr. Larguire had placed, and hauled it away. There was no signs of trouble as Mr. Larguire made no interferance with the workmen. What the future developments will be no one is able to say at this time.
